General Bernard W. Rogers, USA
Supreme Allied Commander, Europe

General Rogers,

Thank you for your 10 January letter endorsing the NATO Intelligence Support Steering Group. I, too, am pleased that the Department of Defense is bringing together such key players to move ahead on the vital issue of intelligence support to NATO. [redacted] who is my personal representative to this effort, is confident that real progress can be made.

The initial phase of our efforts will involve the discussion of sensitive national information, which would preclude Admiral Rodocanachi's participation. Your use of General Heinz should fill the void until your NATO intelligence chief can contribute his formidable talents to the process.

I reaffirm my commitment to explore all possible ways to provide the necessary intelligence to help you and your field commanders to prevent or win a war in Europe.

Sincerely,

[redacted]

John N. McMahon
Acting Director
